- 1249 An important collection of letters between Miss Florence Nightingale (1820 - 1910) and Miss Leslie Gardiner (? - 1887), fellow nurse, peer and colleague of Nightingale. Correspondence spans the years 1875 - 1880 to include personal and professional communications. The earliest letter dated May 5 '75, addressed to Miss Hill, relating to Leslie Gardiner whom she says of....'...I am sorry and glad that Miss Gardiner has the Canterbury Hospital: sorry because Highgate will miss her much: glad because she will carry the same devotion to a larger sphere of usefulness...', further letters relate to the 'Nightingale' nurses and the provision of nurses '...I am always glad to hear from you and your work... I assure you we wish to help you with another nurse, if we can...we do not like to give a probationer just out of training, but rather one who has been tested a little.', also personal matters including letter dated August 10th 1877 in which Florence Nightingale recounts her mother's failing health, 'The reason I have been unable to write is this: your note reached me here. I had been summoned down here to take charge of my Mother, a widow and infirm. a few hours after my arrival, a case of infectious disease, not contracted here, declared itself in a new corner, which is spite of Nursing and Medical care, proved fatal. I could summon no one to help me and I am scarcely able to write even this...God help us. God speed our work for we need his love.'.seven side letter of March 28th 1880, written on black lined mourning paper, deals with her reaction to her mother's passing and the stress of this '...The Dr's tell me that I must be 'free' for at least a year 'from the responsibilities which have been forced upon me...'. Also letters which allude to Florence Nightingale's views of traditional nursing methods include one dated March 15th, 1878...'...I have sent, sorely against the grain, her choice of a 'Midwifery' book, fit only for medical students and to make nurses into (word unclear) ignorant', Would you think were to tell her my personal experience of this result. Where it does not lead to manslaughter, in the two dying in training schools of which we spoke about together'. Other letters by Nightingale and others, the collection to include 17 letters from Nightingale, 19 letters in total Provenance: The Gardiner Family thence by direct family decent. £5,000-7,000
